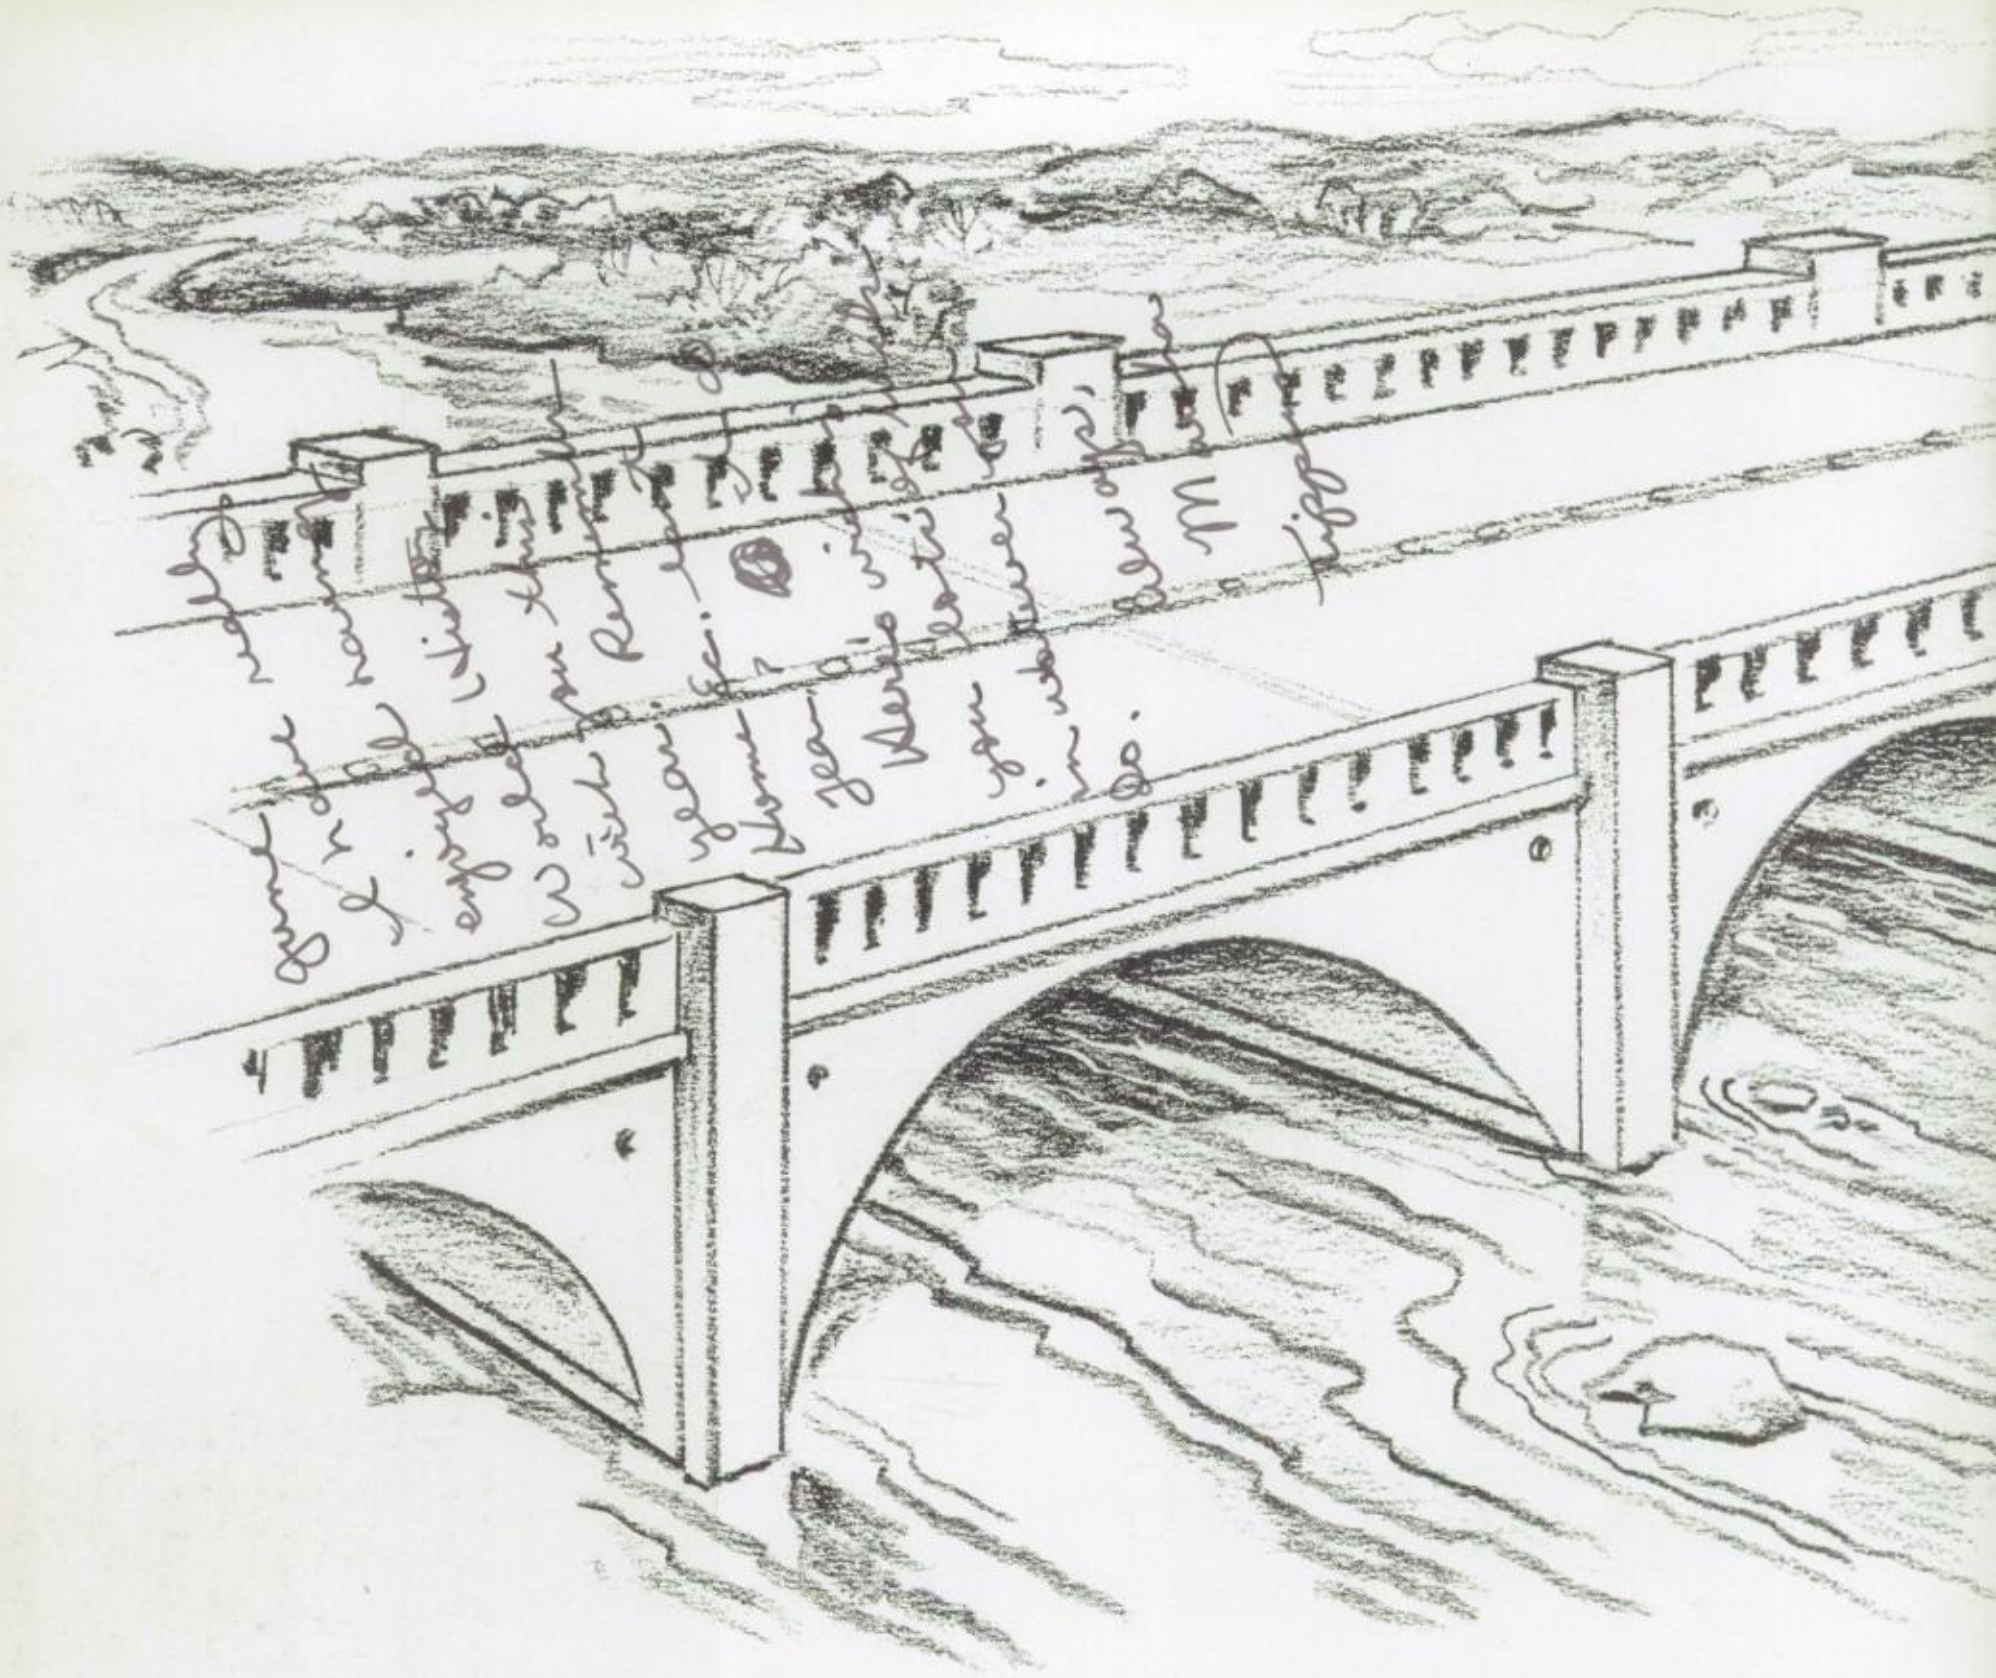
The 1960

SEQUOYAH



FOREWORD

Bridges—used by almost everyone but appreciated by few—are often taken for granted. Linking the different sections of the county, they span the rivers, streams, and valleys, creating the unity necessary for a strong and stable community.

These structures of steel and concrete which help us to cross ravines and waterways and to unite our lives with the forces around us symbolize our personal bridge—Cherokee High School—which spans the gap between childhood and young adulthood. Since each incident we experience during this time helps in the formation of our characters, it is perhaps the most important four years in our lives.

Just as the strength of a bridge depends upon a strong foundation, so does our school need strength in the pillars that uphold it—wisdom, leadership, co-operation, stature, fellowship, and school spirit.

Developing each of these qualities in our day by day lives at school helps us to prepare for the challenges we will meet in later life. Some of us will go immediately into various vocations; others will go on to higher education; but all will assume the responsibilities of citizenship, of our homes, and of the positions we hold in the world of tomorrow.

DEDICATION

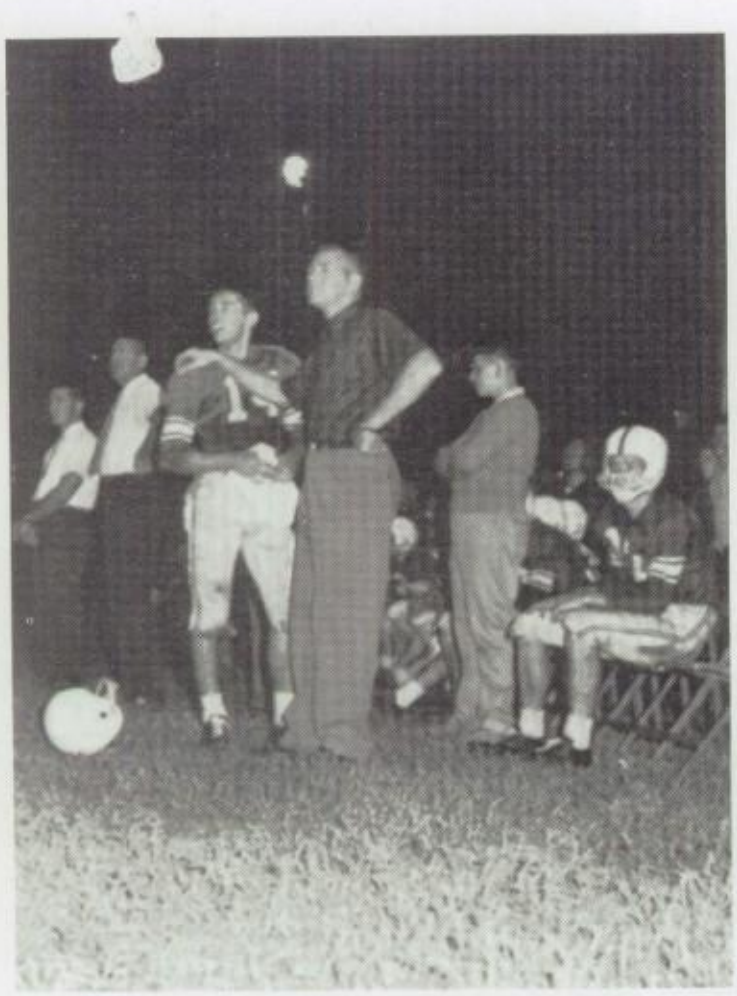
Because of his immeasurable value to Cherokee High School as head coach, as mathematics teacher, and as advisor of the Lettermen's Club, we dedicate this 1960 SEQUOYAH to Coach Lowell Vancil.

Coach Vancil's knowledge of football and track, his calm decisions under pressure, and his ability to press onward even though the odds may be against his team, have won the admiration of the team's supporters as well as the players. However, his interest in the athletic program does not end with football and track, but extends to all sports through his work as advisor to the Lettermen's Club.

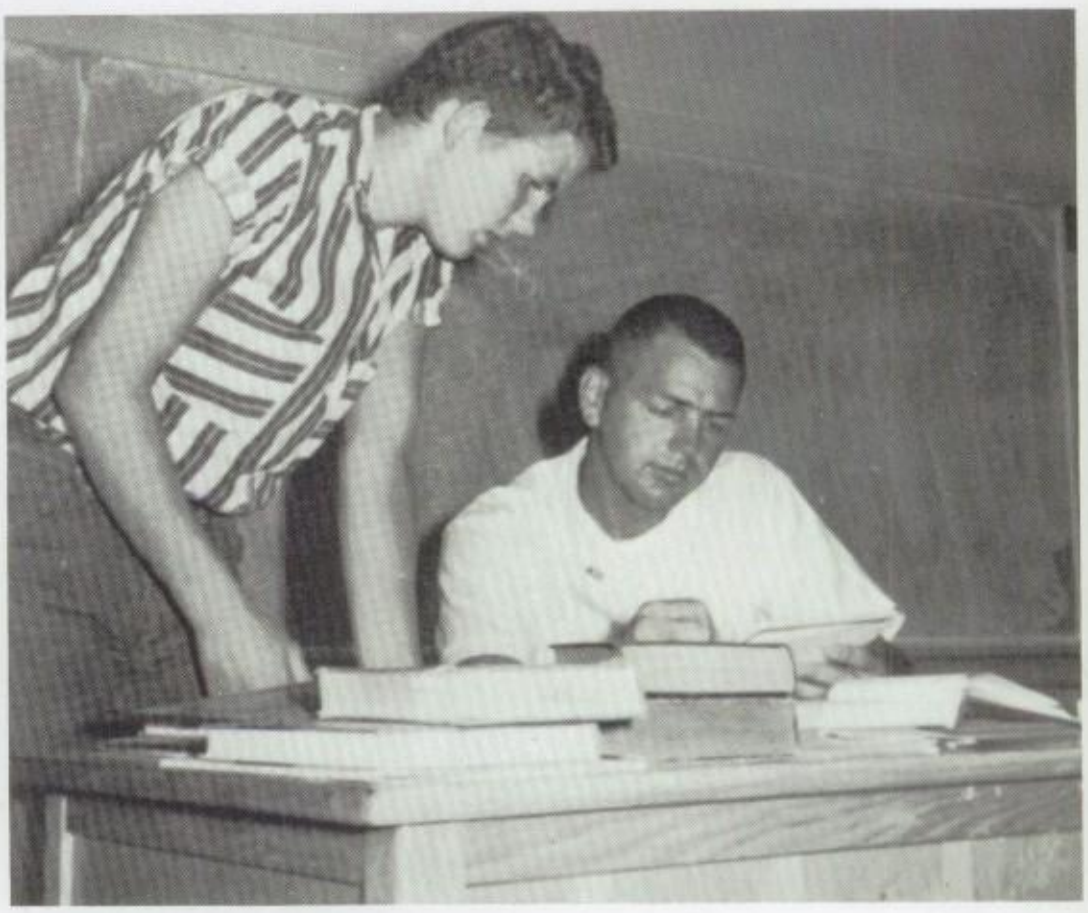
In the role of algebra and geometry teacher, Coach rates not only as a qualified teacher, but also as a leader of the student body. His interest in all phases of school life is exemplified by his aid to all worthy school activities, while interest in the students themselves led to the formation of a new course in drafting.

Coach Vancil's eagerness to help the students with their problems has won for him many lasting friends. His helpful criticism and praise are always ready for those who deserve it. No matter how busy he may be, Coach Vancil will take time to give his pupils the value of his ideals, proven by past experience.

Because of these outstanding qualities, Coach Lowell Vancil has become one of the most respected persons at Cherokee High, resulting in this—the highest honor the 1960 SEQUOYAH can bestow.



On the side lines, Coach Vancil anxiously watches the play before deciding on his next move.



Coach Vancil instructs Dwight Jarvis in the best way to make a geometric proof.

LEADERSHIP

Wisdom in mind and spirit and the ability to lead are qualities which must be developed within students during the phase of their lives extending from childhood to adulthood. In our personal bridge across this gap—Cherokee High School—these qualities are firm pillars supporting it and helping us to make the journey.

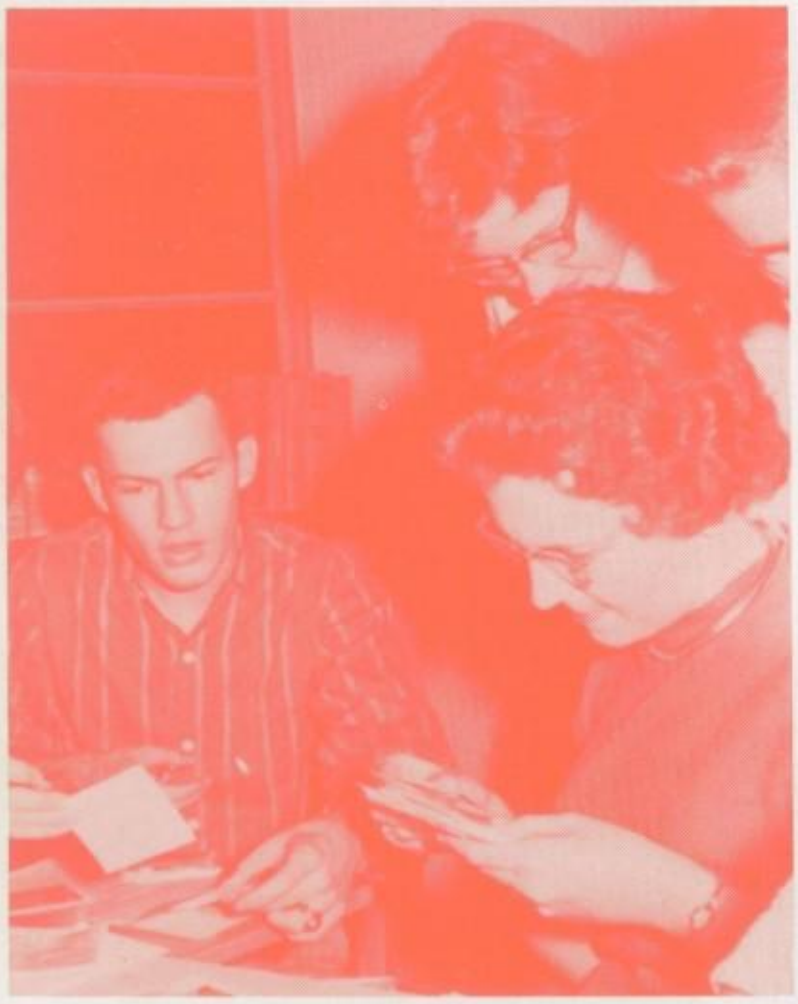
While we—the students—are making the journey, Cherokee High offers opportunities for us to increase our knowledge and our understanding of the world. In the classes, by use of the reference in the library, and through the everyday happenings in the life of a student, we at Cherokee are prepared for our adulthood.

But perhaps the most important area of wisdom attained is the personal leadership developed within the students themselves. Students with this leadership possess the strength of character to accept responsibilities in spite of their difficulties and to strive to fulfill them. Such outstanding work serves as a guide and an incentive to others.

So, at Cherokee, qualities are being implanted within us—the students—which will be essential for us if in our adulthood we are going to lead successful, useful, and happy lives.

Gilla Gunter, president of the senior class, introduces the candidates for Homecoming Queen.

The proud but surprised winners of Cherokee County's annual soil conservation essay contest—Max Brand, Robert Mann, and Teddy Porter—accept their awards.



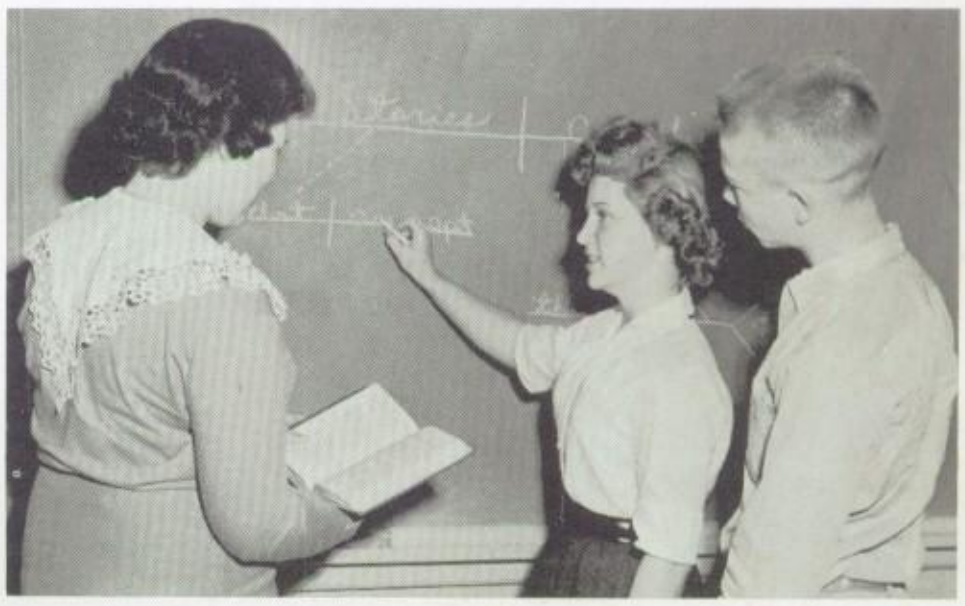
Supervising the progress of a yearbook is at times a hectic task; but through his calm leadership, Tom Keith has unified the staff's efforts into a successful book.

As president of the Student Council, Benny Bishop addresses the student body during a chapel program sponsored by the organization.

Outside information on subjects encountered in students' courses enlarges understanding and interest.

WISDOM

Thursday lab acquaints physics and chemistry students with the intriguing but sometimes complicated process of science.



The combined knowledge of three persons is sometimes better than just that of one.

To begin the day, Cherokee students share a few moments of reverence.

The last few minutes before reaching the lunch counter sometimes seem to be the longest of the day, but Cherokee students let co-operation and consideration be their guides.

Efficiency and dependability are the trademarks of Cherokee's library assistants.

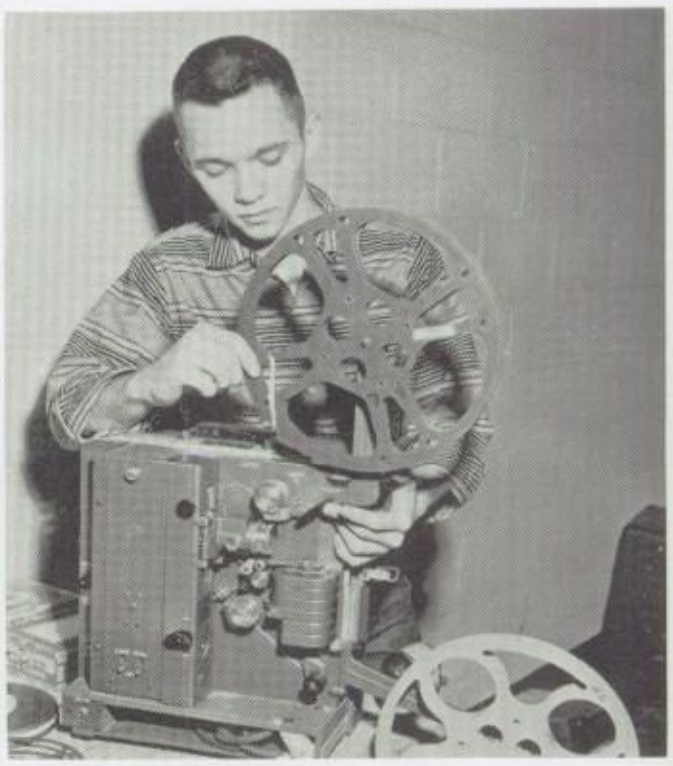
COOPERATION

Just as we—the students of Cherokee High—are the constituting elements of the school so are to qualities co-operation and fellowship essential pillars supporting the bridge.

Students assisting in the office and in the library, those co-operating with the faculty, and students maintaining order in the lunchroom line are examples of the caliber of student who enable Cherokee High to offer the best opportunities for students to receive a full education.

Constituting an essential part of such an education is the fellowship which we—the students receive from participating in class discussions, club activities, and sports events; attending dances and athletic contests; and meeting in the lobby each morning. Besides making school life more enjoyable, such fellowship serves as a means for the students to learn to function as part of a group.

Aside from enabling the typical school day to be orderly and meaningful to the purpose of projecting knowledge, the elements fellowship and co-operation serve as a means for the students to learn to meet and to associate with others—abilities essential for our later lives.



Maintaining school equipment is a tedious but necessary task—one accomplished by students and teachers alike.

Mr. Mashburn assists underclassmen in planning for their future.

Presidents Mary Linda Garrett and Larry Haley present Benny Bishop, president of the student council, with checks from the FHA and the FFA to further the landscaping of the campus.

Even what appears to be an unhappy occurrence can be a source of enjoyment in the Cherokee High lobby.

Homegame excitement for Cherokee High students does not cease with the games but continues with the sockhops.

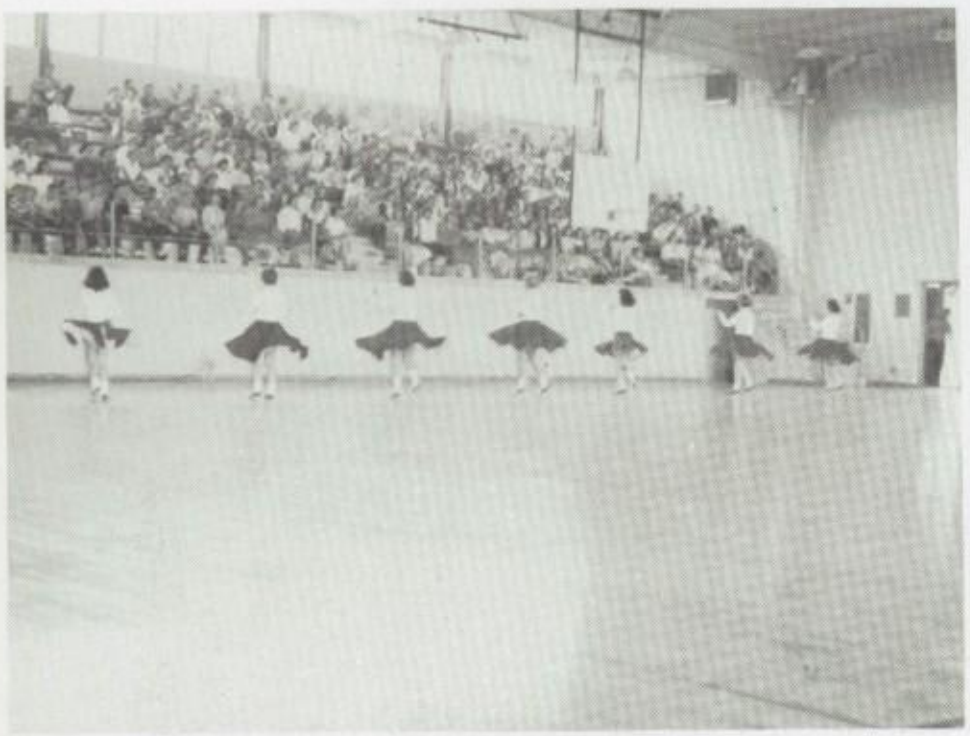
FELLOWSHIP

Spontaneous pep rallies increase the enthusiasm of the Cherokee High students over an upcoming game.

Dancing at the Annual Staff Dance, everyone eagerly awaits the crowning of Miss Sequoyah.

SCHOOL SPIRIT

Tense faces await the results of a decisive play for the Cherokee Warriors.



A spirited pep rally encourages the Warriors to gather their efforts for a Cherokee victory.

In victory or in defeat, Cherokee teams receive student loyalty wherever Cherokee students happen to be.

The industrial arts club's project to landscape the campus with native North Georgia plants typifies the willingness of Cherokee's organizations to work for the improvement of the school.

STATURE

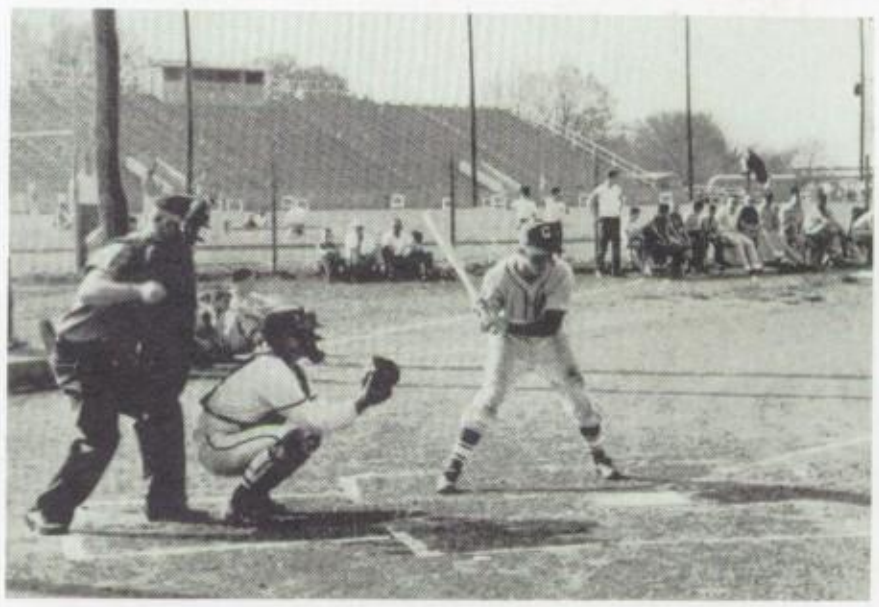
In crossing the gap between our childhood and adulthood, the bridge—Cherokee High School—using stature as a pillar lends support not only to the development of our minds but also to our physical growth. Under trained supervisors both boys and girls at Cherokee may participate in activities beneficial to the development of sound bodies in physical education classes and in the school's athletic program.

Lending support to the athletic program and to the school is another of Cherokee's pillars—"school spirit." With the cheerleaders as their leaders Cherokee's students give their teams support and encouragement. However, at Cherokee, "school spirit" means more to the students than just cheering at football games and pep rallies. In any student activity, improving the school and representing it in a way which they feel will do it justice are Cherokee's students' ways of showing "school spirit." To us—the students of Cherokee High—"school spirit" is a deep devotion felt toward the school which we proudly claim as our own.

Griffin Eagles succeed in stopping David Bagwell only after he has plunged for Cherokee gain.

Determined Warriors strive to gain two points.

Tension rises as Veneda Hendrix leaps for the basket.



Concentration completely engrosses Mike Johnston as he awaits the ball.

This looks easy, but any PE student knows that developing the skill to perform such a feat requires practice—and determination.

ORGANIZA

TIONS

. . . offer to students opportunities for leadership in the fields in which they excel. Interest in vocations and skills which will be useful to the students in later life is activated by individual and group projects. Working together, members of the various organizations achieve the goals they set for themselves. In addition to the serious tasks performed by each group, there are traditional activities of recreation and fellowship.

Tri-Hi-Y — Creates, Maintains, Extends

"To create, maintain, and extend throughout the home, school, and community high standards of Christian character" is a strong purpose. The Tri-Hi-Y and Hi-Y clubs seek to make this purpose become a true part of each member's life. Inspiring devotionals which offer food for thought to every girl and boy are given at each meeting.

In an age when teen-agers are faced with great problems, it is imperative that they receive the Christian guidance and influence greatly needed. The Young Men's Christian Association in Georgia realized this need for Christian guidance. Because of their endless efforts, almost every Georgia youth has the opportunity to affiliate in a high school Christian association known as Tri-Hi-Y and Hi-Y.

It is through Tri-Hi-Y and Hi-Y that Christian teen-agers tell their classmates, their church, their community, and their world that "the power is ours—to dream, to dare, and to do—"

School projects chairman, Evelyn Turner, crowns Johnny Lewis and Lemual White as "Goofiest Boy and Girl."

Y-Council Promotes Christian Activities

When five clubs seek to carry out one purpose, it is necessary to have a co-ordinating group. The "Y" Council provides a way for the Tri-Hi-Y and Hi-Y clubs to work together and therefore function more effectively.

This Council is composed of the presidents, the advisors, and the representatives from each club. Once a month the group meets to discuss projects of each club. In this way, the clubs know one another's undertakings and repeated projects are avoided.

At times it is more effective for all the Tri-Hi-Y and Hi-Y clubs to combine efforts in a certain project. Thus the "Y" Council not only serves as a co-ordinating factor between the clubs, but it also promotes Christian activities in home, school, and community.

Miss Benham, advisor, and Lela Belle Howell, President, study outline as reference for one of the "Y" sponsored projects.

Student Council Emphasizes School Citizenship

The Student Council is a group composed of representatives from the student body. Each spring the candidates campaign for their offices and are elected by the entire student body.

With the interest of the whole school in mind, they have worked diligently on projects affecting and influencing all areas of school life. Starting in the early winter, they sponsored a vocational emphasis program based on the choices indicated by the students. As a major contribution to C.H.S., the Student Council spearheaded a campaign to revise the school constitution; and later in the year this group sponsored the selection of Man of the Year.

Underlying all activities, there existed the constant attempt to emphasize the need for good citizenship in all phases of a student's day . . . at home, at school, and at social functions.

Benny Bishop, president, and Mr. Mashburn, Advisor, complete plans for the Vocational Emphasis Program.

The F.H.A. is a national organization of girls who, through the capable leadership of their advisors, are becoming better homemakers. This club is open to all high school girls enrolled in the home economics classes. Emphasis extends beyond the home and into the community as members learn and practice high ideals in their everyday life.

The F.H.A. has undertaken projects which include a coat hanger sale, a Thanksgiving box for a needy family, and any other service project which presented itself.

Highlights of the year are projects co-sponsored by the FFA and FHA—the rose garden, the Valentine dance, and the financial aid to landscaping school grounds.

Throughout the year, this group has originated, completed, and maintained many projects of lasting value to our school. Greatest among these has been improving the landscape of Cherokee High, but meaningful to the entire school have been their constant efforts to improve any area—from repairing lockers to building milk cases for the lunchroom to adjusting water coolers.

Beta Club

To promote the ideals of honesty, service, and leadership among high school students, to reward scholastic achievement, and to encourage students to continue their education after high school—these are the goals of the Beta Club.

It is an organization composed of junior and senior students of high academic standing and of good character. At the end of the sophomore year students become eligible for membership which requires three consecutive six weeks periods with an average of 90 or above.

Climaxing the year's activities is the annual Beta Club Convention held in Atlanta.

The purpose of the Library Council is to assist in rendering better and more efficient library service to the students and teachers. Through the help of Miss Quarles, these people have learned how a library is run and have gained experience in doing the various jobs necessary to run an efficient library.

These students, with guidance, perform all functions which ultimately result in truly fine service for the entire school—from the early before-class rush to the late afternoon research and study.

Choral Music

The Choral Club is an organization of approximately 150 pupils which meets five days a week during regular class scheduled time. It is a relatively new program in our school, only in its second year.

Within the Choral Music program are two music appreciation courses that are required of any new member coming into the club. Through this course the choral members come to understand principles of good music which they later apply to their performances. Also included are the Girls' Madrigal, the Mixed Chorus, and the Glee Club.

During the year, under the capable leadership of Miss Laverne Holton, the Choral Club has furnished music for special programs and for music clinics.

Presenting appropriately chosen selections, this group has meant much to local civic organizations, for the quality of their performances has added both personal enjoyment and a closer unity between school and community.

The Christmas Concert presented on December 17 was a highlight of the season and of the year for the group.

C-Club

The Letterman's Club promotes an interest in athletics and emphasizes good sportsmanship whether one is playing or sitting in the stands. Membership is dependent upon participation in a varsity sport—football, basketball, track, baseball, and cheerleading.

Projects this year have included dances after the games, a float in the Homecoming Parade, and the purchase of a trophy case for the gymnasium lobby.

Becoming a C Club member requires sacrifices—but it is worth it.

Developing leadership and high ideals, the Key Club is a boy's organization sponsored by the school officials in co-operation with the local Kiwanis Club. The club is a group of the leaders from all phases of school work. Promoting and rewarding the achievements of boys throughout the school are the main interests of the Key Club. This club is composed primarily of upper classmen.

Highlighting 1960 will be a state convention held in Albany. This convention offers an opportunity for fellowship with members from other clubs over the state.

Art Club

A need for stimulation of greater interest in art led to the organization of the Art Club. It was created to help develop an appreciation for both the world's masterpieces and the artistic principles which relate to the life of each student.

Members try to cultivate this interest in every possible way. The main project of the year, an art exhibit consisting of the work of both students and other members of the community, was held in late spring. It is hoped that this project will act as a stimulus for increased interest and effort.

Warriors Edged By Tough

Tenseness mounts in closing moments of 7-6 win over Riverside.

Head Coach Lowell Vancil, assisted by coaches Kelton Cook, Jim Davis and Dave Harris, led the 1959 Cherokee High Warriors to a season record of 4 wins and 6 losses. In the second year of triple A competition, the Warriors faced tough teams from North and Central Georgia.

Hard practices throughout the season not only helped prepare the boys for the Friday night games but also helped develop ideals of fair play and sportsmanship and friendships of lasting quality.

FEATURES

. . . add gaiety and dignity to the everyday routine at school. Each activity, from a sock hop after a ball game to one of the important formals, adds to the enjoyment and experience of each student in rounding out the school year. These special times enable the students to know themselves and others in the light of friendliness and fellowship. The preparation is almost as much fun as the event itself, and the sponsors of Cherokee's varied activities deserve much praise.

THAD GREEN

Selected by the vote of the entire student body, the Man of the Year is the senior boy who, in all areas represents the qualities most indicative of Cherokee High. These qualities, consisting of leadership, scholarship, co-operation, school spirit, and personality, are the basic elements of character required to be a true Man of the Year.

Mardi Gras Trip Highlights Year

MR. ROY DAWN, Band Director

The Cherokee High Band of Warriors probably lends as much color and spirit to school activities as any other group on the campus.

This year the band was honored by being invited to participate in the Mardi Gras festivities in New Orleans in February. In addition to working on performances for football games, concerts, parades, and participation in Civic functions much hard work went into preparation for this special event.

Who's Who

As a member of Who's Who, a senior has achieved what is perhaps the highest honor obtainable at Cherokee High for a student. These seniors, selected by the faculty, are those who possess the very finest qualities which, when combined with later maturity, will produce the leaders of tomorrow.

Each of these students has, in his own way, contributed greatly to his school, to his classmates, and to his community. They have given diligently of their time to endeavors affecting not only themselves but also those with whom they associate. They have achieved respect from the student body and the faculty as well as from the other members of the community, and they have united in their lives the constructive influences stemming from every area of development in their school and home life.

It is to these that the Sequoyah gives tribute.

ANN WIMBISH

Maintaining a high academic record, Ann Wimbish manages to participate in other school activities. For example, she is assistant editor of the Sequoyah Staff, editor of the Chieftain, and President of the Medical Career Club. Ann's versatile personality and dependability have endeared her to those with whom she daily associates. Regardless of the responsibility, Ann's quiet strength lends a prevailing dignity to her efforts and to the efforts of others.

LARRY JOHNSTON

Larry Johnston, known for his dependability and scholastic average as well as for his friendliness and willingness toward his associates, has served on the Debate and Essay Teams and is a member of the Key Club and the Beta Club. Larry is a student who excels because of his inclination to face squarely, to work diligently, and to complete successfully any situation presented to him.

The strength of his ability has made Larry a dominant member of the 1960 seniors.

SAMMIE LESLIE

Sammie Leslie can be described as a dependable and tenacious worker. In addition to being a member of the Varsity Club, F.H.A., and Chieftain Staff, she was elected captain of the girls basketball team and secretary of the Beta Club. Sammie is among the most capable and most popular students at Cherokee.

ROBERT MANN

Robert Mann is president of the Beta Club this year and a member of the 4-H Club. He is noted as a capable scholar and is one of the best liked students at Cherokee High because of his amiable personality. Robert is always available to those who want help with their work and has always been anxious to help any individual or help to develop any project where his ability and talents are needed.

GILLA GUNTER

Most students know Gilla Gunter by her ardent smile and amicable "Hello." She is the senior class president this year and also a member of the Tri-Hi-Y, Beta Club and Chieftain Staff. Gilla has became a skillful basketball player in her four years at Cherokee and a popular and able student.

TOM KEITH

Besides his ability in leadership, Tom Keith possesses other qualities which make him a versatile person. He is the editor of the Sequoyah, treasurer of the Key Club, and a member of the Beta Club and Student Council. Because of his ingratiating personality and friendly "Hi," Tom has acquired many friends who admire the genuine depth of interest and sincerity displayed in any undertaking. Stemming from this sincerity are his efforts for his community, his school, and his friends.

THAD GREEN

Resulting from his co-operation and leadership with the people who work with and around him, Thad Green has become one of the impressive members of the senior class. His sportsmanship has carried him into every phase of athletic competition of Cherokee High, culminating in a football scholarship to the University of Florida. He is an outstanding student and participant of such school associations as the Key Club, Varsity Club, and Student Council. Thad has been an asset to the students and faculty here at Cherokee.

BENNY BISHOP

A smiling countenance and a friendly personalty are two characteristics describing Benny Bishop. He has been quite active in such school organization as the Key Club, Beta Club, Student Council, and Varsity Club. As president of the junior class, Benny did an admirable job in organizing the Jr.-Sr. Prom. These qualities that Benny possesses make him the exceptional person and student that he is.

TOMMY BAKER

(1942-1957)

Because of the inherently fine qualities displayed by Tommy Baker in his association with the students, in his fight with polio, and in his indomitable spirit, it is felt that he would have indeed been included in Who's Who. This, then, is a sincere tribute from the Seniors of 1960.

CLASSES

. . . fulfill the real purpose of school—to increase knowledge and the desire for knowledge within school students. With the aid of competent teachers, students learn new questions and new answers about the world in which they live. The strides taken now toward wisdom and leadership in knowledge are often indications of the strides to be taken in adult life.

Mr. Jordan and Mr. Boston confer about one of the many problems facing them. It is only through the leadership of Mr. Jordan, principal, and Mr. Boston, superintendent, that Cherokee High can maintain the standards necessary to bridge successfully the gap between childhood and adulthood.

Best Wishes!
Jim W. Jordan

Administration and Faculty

The structure of a bridge is only as substantial as the architect's plan—so our school, a personal bridge for each student leading from childhood into young adulthood, is built on the strength of the curriculum upheld and presented by the faculty.

Supporting the basic pillars of wisdom, leadership, co-operation, stature, school spirit, and fellowship, the administrative element of Cherokee High—superintendent, principal, faculty—plan, organize, lead, and instruct to instill in us both the technical "know-how" and the intangible qualities which lead to the acceptance and the successful outcome of the challenges to be met by each student.

Subject matter and instruction combine to prepare us for the positions we will hold in the future. For those planning to go into the business world, there are commercial courses designed to instruct us in the application of office skills. For those planning to continue their education, there are courses providing background in oral and written English, history, science, math, and foreign languages. The home economics lab prepares girls for the responsibilities they will face in marriage whether immediately or several years hence.

There are elective courses and extra-curricular activities which serve as a means of developing our talents. Whatever our future after high school, the years spent at Cherokee High will act as a source of strength upon which to draw when it is needed.

Mr. Donald Sams, assistant principal, is always ready and willing to discuss a student's problems with him.

Language Department Enriched

A strong English Department is included in the Cherokee High School curriculum. The teachers in this department attempt to instruct us in the basic fundamentals of English grammar. Through written and oral work, we learn to appreciate the great literary classics. In our junior and senior years we delve even deeper into American and English literature.

French and Spanish are offered to the students interested in foreign language. We not only obtain a knowledge of the basic grammar, but we also acquire an insight into the background and cultures of these countries.

Donald Sams

Through the History and Social Studies Department students learn not only of modes of ancient civilizations, but also of the effects that these patterns of life have on modern life. As history helps one to interpret present day problems, it helps us, as students who will become tomorrow's leaders, to realize that even small changes in the community are reflections of world changes.

The use of maps enables Mr. Dickerson to emphasize to his classes the relation between history and geography.

Mr. Sams and Mr. Dawn prepare to show the band films of a half-time show.

Miss Pace is amused by Lloyd Gray's current events report.

Varied Activities Highlight Senior Year

Gilla Gunter pantomimes at the Sequoyah Staff dance.

These 1960 seniors, the first class to go all the way through Cherokee, will always remember the good times enjoyed and knowledge gained during their high school years. With each year new activities created by new interests added to the student's feeling for his school, till finally the last year came the thrill of being a senior.

In clubs, in class rooms, and in athletic contests students have enjoyed working and learning with their classmates—not to mention the associations one has in the various social activities at school.

Preparing for his adulthood, a graduating senior can indeed be proud of a well spent four years at Cherokee High.

An exciting moment brings Warrior rooters to their feet.

Knowledge, Recreation, and Fellowship

In the late afternoon Juniors cut confetti to finance the Junior-Senior Prom.

In the gymnasium, the cafeteria, and the classroom, students enjoy the modern facilities provided for them. The gym provides for a good athletic and physical education program. In the lobby and cafeteria students enjoy fellowship with each other. While the classroom fulfills the needs and desire for knowledge. With the aid of newly acquired, NDA matching funds it is hoped that Cherokee's facilities will be completed to include every possible convenience.

Steve Sams and Billy Boston "slug it out" in physical education boxing class.

An important part of each Miss Sequoyah contestant's competition is an interview with the judges. Here, Stevie Cullens answers questions with the aid of an illustrating hand.

Dear Boys and Girls of Cherokee High,

I am so thankful that you have a good high school in our county to go to. When I was a boy, high schools were scarce.

Since you students will be the future leaders of our churches, schools, and government, let me beg you to make the most of your opportunities in high school.

It is a burden for parents to send their children to school, so don't let them down.

Remember this down the pathway of life.

June,
I have enjoyed going to school with you and knowing you. As you slide down the learning tree may you be stuck with a splinter. Loads of luck and buckets of success and happiness be yours always.

Love,
Ruth Bishop

Best of luck in anything to you
Arnold Williams

June,
I have enjoyed going to school with you and hiding the bus with you. You are a real cute and nice girl. May you have the best life has to offer.

Love your cousin,
